Local Church Women To Have Active Year With Many Meetings

The Women's Societies of the Trinitarian Congregational church have planned a busy season of meetings and gatherings for this season and have issued a booklet containing all necessary information for the guidance of the membership. The annual meeting of all the societies will be held in January. The Ladies' Sewing Society will meet the first and third Thursdays of the month and Mrs. F. S. Merrifield is the president. The Women's Missionary society under the direction of Mrs. N. Fay Smith as president will take up the study of missions in the homes of its members and at the church as announced from time to time. The schedule also calls for all-day sewing meetings. The society will take up the study of the Negro in discussions led by its members.

The W. C. T. U. with Mrs. N. Fay Smith as president will meet every third Wednesday of the month usually at the home of one of its members. The Mid-week Bible class will meet Tuesdays at 3 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. L. R. Smith, leader.

The Mothers' society with Mrs. Roy Barrow, president, will meet the second Wednesday of each month to consider the general theme of "Our Children." The Evening Auxiliary, Miss Daisy Holton, president, holds its meetings on Friday evenings with a well defined program of subjects and assignments made of its membership to present the same.

These six organizations of women in the church have well defined activities and are supplemental to the regular work of the church in which women participate to a great degree.

Another official inspection will be made of the Northfield Chapter, O. E. S. at Masonic hall on the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 7, when Mrs. Bertha M. Jones, Deputy Grand Matron, assisted by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hersey, Deputy Grand Marshall will pay their annual visit. The session will convene at 5:30 o'clock and supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock. The evening session will begin at 8 o'clock. Quite a number of out-of-town visitors are expected to attend the inspection. Mrs. Theodore F. Darby is worthy Matron of the local chapter.

That Vernon Station

That the East Northfield freight station located in South Vernon may serve the needs of Vernon has been brought out in the presentation of facts presented to the Public Service Commission of Vermont in its consideration of the closing of the Vernon station on the C. V. R. R.

The railroad has proposed the closing of the station although contested by some residents of Vernon. The maintenance of the station has been a constant source of financial loss to the railroad. The Vermont Public Service Commission has heard the case and considered the facts but as yet no approval has been given to the railroad's request for its closing.

The commission stated that it found that the railroad's proposed plan to discontinue the Vernon station would provide for its use as a flag station, for the stopping of mail trains and for the leaving and picking up of freight but that the station would not be heated or lighted.

Registration Dates

The board of registrars announce the following dates for the registration of new voters: Saturday, Oct. 3, from 7 to 9 p. m. and Wednesday, Oct. 14 from 12 noon to 10 p. m. at the town hall.

All citizens whose names are not on the polls and who desire to vote at the election of Nov. 3, should attend to the matter of registration at once.

Repair Dam Ends

Work is under way at the Vernon dam on the Connecticut river to make permanent repairs and reconstruction on the east end of the dam which suffered from the devastating flood of last March. Permission to make these permanent improvements has been granted by the New Hampshire public service commission. The east end of the dam goes into an earth bank and it was at this spot that the wearing away of the soil by the rushing waters necessitated the calling of the National Guard from Keene and volunteer workers from Hinsdale in order to protect the earthen bank by the placing of hundreds of sand bags to stay the rush of water.

Student Loses Life In Swimming Pool At The Seminary

The accidental death by drowning late Tuesday afternoon in the Munger swimming pool of the seminary cast a pall over the student body and in Northfield itself. Miss Mary E. Barnard, 71, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. O. E. Barnard of Hatfield was the unfortunate victim. She was a senior at the Seminary, a keen student and resided at Gould hall, where she was a floor supervisor.

She had joined her class in swimming instruction Tuesday afternoon under the direction of a competent instructor in the physical education department, and was checked out with the other members when the lesson had ended. It is presumed that for some reason she must have returned to the pool when something happened, perhaps a faint or heart attack.

She was missed from the group at the supper hour and the fact was immediately investigated when her body was found in the pool. A hurried call was sent to Greenfield for the pulmotor and a squad of men under Deputy Fire Chief Charles Ricker responded with John Suhl and Harry James of the Electric Co., and the local Red Cross emergency crew of Paul Thompson, Ray Thompson and Edward Tenney. After working steadily for a resuscitation for three hours, the girls' was pronounced dead by Medical Examiner Halbert H. Stetson. Dr. Hardy, the Seminary physician, had been called in immediately.

Besides her parents, Miss Barnard's survivors include a sister and brother; Lois, who is employed at the Northfield hotel and Orville, at home. Miss Mira B. Wilson in a statement to the press said: "Miss Barnard, who had just begun her senior year, had been a student at the Seminary since September, 1934. She attended the last swimming class which ended at 5:20 p. m. Two swimming instructors, inspected the pool after the class was dismissed and both said no one was seen in the pool, locker rooms, or gymnasium. It is believed the girl may have returned for another swim after the class had hurried off to dinner which was served soon after the final period. We are saddened by the tragedy."

The body was removed to Kidder's funeral parlors and the funeral service, attended by the student body, was held in Sage Chapel, Thursday morning. Amid a profusion of flowers tributes were paid to Miss Barnard by Miss Wilson and Rev. Mr. Ingalls. It was a solemn service. The Seminary choir sang its requiem. The body was taken to Northfield, Vt., for burial in the family plot where her parents had previously resided, immediately after the funeral service.

Andrews Resigns

Mr. F. Raymond Andrews has resigned as President of the Trustees of the Franklin County hospital after a number of years faithful service and until his successor is chosen Rev. John B. Whiteman, vice-president will act. Mr. Andrews resigns owing to the press of personal business matters but his administration has witnessed considerable improvement in the financial set-up of the organization. Mr. A. G. Moody is a member of the Board of Trustees representing Northfield. In his resignation Mr. Andrews expresses his appreciation of the cooperation of the people of the county.

Mr. A. P. Pitt conducted the service of the Federated church of Putney, Vt., last Sunday.

Bridge Completion Being Rapidly Pushed For Central Vermont

Contractors for the construction of the new bridge across the Connecticut river for the Central Vermont railroad to take the place of the one lost in the March flood are making rapid progress. The piers have been raised and reconstructed and one of the iron spans has already assumed form and shape. The second span is half way across and will be finished within a couple of weeks. A third span remains to be built.

Forty men are employed on the structure, most of them by the American Bridge Co., which is erecting the steel work. A Central Vermont crew of 11 men is engaged in taking parts of the wrecked bridge from the river, putting approach girders in place and otherwise aiding in the construction. Two railroad inspectors and a railroad engineer are also assigned to the project.

The new bridge is to rest on the old abutments and all but one of the old piers in the stream are being used. One new pier has been constructed, and the other piers and abutments have been cut down and capped with cement. A 50-foot girder approach span and the first main span, 170 feet long, of the old bridge on the west side of the river were not torn from their foundations by the ice and have been repaired to become part of the new structure. The old span was raised 14 inches and the piers on which it rests were capped with cement.

The 50-foot girder approach on the eastern end of the bridge has been salvaged, and will be put in place again by the railroad crew this week. Other steel work is being taken from the river, the "I" beams being salvaged and the rest of the metal scrapped. None of the beams is being used in the new Northfield bridge except the approaches, however.

The entire structure will be about 780 feet in length, carry a single track, and will be of sufficient strength to support the 700 series freight locomotives, among the largest engines in New England. Its completion will eliminate the inconvenience and expense to the Central Vermont of re-routing all its freight trains through Greenfield over the B. & M. line between East Northfield and Millers Falls. It is expected also that passenger service to Palmer and New London which has been carried on by bus and truck between Brattleboro and Northfield since the March flood, will be resumed by rail from this town when the bridge is finished. Passenger trains on the New London division now have Northfield as their northern terminal.

The loss of the Northfield bridge was by far the most serious flood damage suffered by the Central Vermont railway last spring. It is expected the new bridge will be completed by the first of November.

Receives Prize Money

Mr. B. O. Moody, vice-president of the Amherst National bank recently wrote an article on "The Connecticut Flood" of March 19, in which he described the evacuation of residents of Hadley and his own experiences in assisting in which he and his son were thrown into the waters by the ice floes and narrowly escaped drowning. He entered it in a contest of short story writers in a prominent magazine and was one of ten to receive an award of $1000. Mr. Moody is well known to many here as he visited here often in behalf of the Old Colony Trust Co., with whom he was connected before going to Amherst.

C. attended an important meeting of the society last week Thursday in Greenfield at which time it was reported that $2100 of the $4000 required to finance the work for this year had been raised. Several towns in the county have delayed their appeal including Northfield but they will be held this fall. Mrs. W. Herbert Nichols president, has been very active in the work of the organization.

Reporting on work accomplished this year, Miss Adelaide Hood, county agent, said that the society had as many cases to date as it had during the entire year of 1935. Besides 105 cases, there have been 12 requests for service from agencies in other states, where there were only four last year. The society, she said, has collected since the first of the year $865.35 for the support of children from families responsible, and also pointed out that 30 children had been treated.

Social Season Opens October Busy Month; Many Events Ahead

The fall season of local activities has already opened and October promises to be a very busy month. Every local organization has announced its plans for the coming year and the initial meetings are fixed.

The Masonic lodge and the Eastern Star hold inspections; the Fortnightly begins with a luncheon; the Parent-Teachers, the Grange, the Alliance, the Brotherhood, all have named meeting dates. The societies of the churches begin their activities and annual meetings are on the calendar.

The weddings of two residents are stated and numerous small social functions are in order, such as teas, bridge parties and receptions. The political season just prior to the November election calls for much time, also from our people. Northfield promises its citizens plenty of social activities this month.

Writes Splendid Story

In the Liberty magazine of Sept. 19, is a most interesting story entitled "Star Dust." It is a fascinating story of a young lady who enjoys the fervor and interest of the horse races, but most of all what invites attention is the fact that it was written by Barbara Aldrich, a former East Northfield young lady who had spent much of her girlhood and summers here among us. Her real name is Mrs. Barbara Aldrich Jones and she lives in Newton. Her father, the late Mr. Aldrich, was vice-president of the Hood Rubber Co., of Boston and with his wife, resided here in their beautiful home in Mountain Park for many years. Only last week her mother, Mrs. Mary I. Aldrich, now living at Groton, was a visitor in Northfield, calling on many of the friends of former days.

The WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONAL

by MAX BERNIS

National and Local Rule

Is there any advantage in the division of powers between federal, state and local governments?

On this point, Jefferson, in 1799, said: "I am for preserving to the states the powers not yielded by them to the union, and to Congress the legislative of the union, its constitutional share in the division of powers; and I am not for transferring all the powers of the states to the general government, and all those of that government to the executive branch."

In his Autobiography, Jefferson adds: "It is not by the consolidation, or concentration of powers, but by their distribution, that good government is effected. Were not this great country already divided into States, that division must be made, that each might do for itself what concerns itself direct, and what it can so much better do than a distant authority."

"Every State again is divided into counties, each to take care of what lies within its local bounds; each county again into townships or wards, to make minute details; and every ward into farms, to be governed by its individual proprietor."

"It is by this partition of cares," concludes Jefferson, "that the mass of human affairs may be best managed for the good and prosperity of all."

In our Constitution, "we the people" effectuate this principle (a) by definitely limiting the powers of our government and (b) by stating in the 10th Amendment that "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution... are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

THE BIBLE

The Bible tells the way of life And teaches the way to walk; It tells us just what we are And how we ought to talk.

We go there when we are weary For comfort in our distress. It guides and guards us always In the paths of righteousness.

This Book chides us when we turn From the straight and narrow way.

Jesus says "Child follow me I'll not let you go astray."

The Bible is full of treasure Each page as we turn them o'er Gives joy, and faith and gladness And hope of life, evermore.

EDITORIAL

When the largest student body ever to enter Dartmouth College gathered in their opening exercises, President Paul D. Moody exhorted them to prepare for a real struggle in life. He said that "there was a conflict of ideas among men all over the world and men are prepared to stake their all and die. You are preparing yourselves for a struggle and the only way to prepare for a struggle is to struggle." This sounds like a new doctrine perhaps to young men just entering manhood, but to most of us in maturer years, life has always meant a real struggle.

Well, what kind of a winter do you think we will have this season? Down in Belchertown, Herbert A. Goodrich says the onion skins, the corn husks and the animal pelts indicate a winter of steady cold. He is an annual forecaster and says he is generally right.

Down in Groton, Ct., Irving H. Poppe, proprietor of a country store forecasts that southern New England will have a mild rainy winter. He said that this year a southeast wind was prevailing at the exact time of the sun's crossing of the equator and on this fact he based his prediction.

Well cold or warm, rain or snow, it's best to be prepared and have the bin full of coal and plenty of wood. From the experience of the last few years we expect a good old-fashioned winter for Northfield. Just wait and see. Lucky folks who are going south to spend the winter.

There was general satisfaction when the official returns of the recent state primaries were released. The large vote of 418,095 cast for Mr. Haigis, the nominee for Governor, was no surprise to those who have been close to the situation. His excellent record of public service, has given him a background enjoyed by few candidates in recent times.

Attention is called to the fact that the vote received by Mr. Haigis tops the total vote received by the Democratic nominee, Charles F. Hurley, by over 60,000. On all sides this has been taken as a criterion of the turning of the political tide. The maladministration of state affairs during the past nineteen months as well as the disgusting exhibitions of incompetency and unfairness displayed by the ballot-law commission and the dishonest manipulation of contracts, have definitely turned the decent people of the State away from the present administration.

A noteworthy fact stands out in the unfortunate drowning at the Seminary swimming pool last Tuesday and that is that the first call was made to our local Red Cross unit at Spencer's and an immediate response was made. These young men, trained in special emergency assistance, promptly responded, dropping their tasks and forgetting all to render an unselfish service as others came to their support with a pulmotor from Greenfield. It is well worth while for all our citizens to be reminded that this emergency service is at all times available upon short notice.

The Back Yard Gardener

Leaves of orange, crimson, and brown, and the bright blue sky and fleecy clouds make me forget the roar of the crowd that passes by on the concrete or moves to "swing music" with shuffling feet, make me want to get out and roam through rustling leaves and cold gray stones, to see corn shocks and pumpkins bright, and the blackbirds gathering for southward flight. It sets me to thinking of apples red, of elder and dogwoods, and beans and brown bread. Sets me to wondering why—to wondering why—

Well, I guess I'd better stop right there because I seem to be lost in a maze of thoughts about the beauty of autumn. I always have this crazy sort of feeling about this time of year when old Mother Nature's paint pot spills over and I always have trouble telling anybody just how I feel. I guess the best way is very much like my kid nephew said after a Thanksgiving dinner, "I'm full of joy."

So neighbor, if I may pass on a bit of advice, save some gasoline money and take a trip into "them thar hills" most any time now. It's worth any man's time and money.

And a second suggestion is that right now is a mighty fine time to be planning a riot of color in your own back yard for next fall.

Too often we back yard gardeners get enthusiastic early in the spring and then warm weather makes us lazy and we let things slide. Just make a little extra effort to plant some of these annuals later than usual so that they will be in full bloom along in September and October.

Annual phlox, cosmos, marigolds, calendulas, zinnias, bachelor buttons, scabiosa, rudbeckia, verbenas, and four-o'clocks will give you some mighty fine color. And then let me suggest some coleus, iresine, and coxcomb for colored foliage plants.

On second thought, I'm going to mention some chrysanthemums for fall color. Aladdin is one of the newer varieties and produces from July until cut down by frost. Jean Cumming is a pure white and Ruth Hutton is another good early white. Barbara Cumming is a yellow, and R. Marion Hutton is another good yellow. Frances Whittlesey and Ruth Cumming are two very satisfactory bronzes. If you want pink chrysanthemums, try October Girl and Daybreak, or Jean Treadway.

And of course we can't mention chrysanthemums without mentioning some of the Koreans. Mercury is one which changes to a coppery bronze and finally to a blend of old rose and salmon. Ceres is a combination of old gold and soft coppery bronze. And there are, of course, many others.

As I said before, this is the time to make up your color combinations for next year's bloom. Make your list now, order your plants, and next spring do the planting.

Is It Federation?

Editor of the Press:

It is questioned if the minister of our town who spoke to her people, the abstract of whose discourse was printed, in behalf of unity in the religious life of the town—especially in view of the coming celebration of the centenary of the birth of its most distinguished citizen, who was not a denominational man—suggested a federation of the two Congregational churches. If federation, it would seem practical and possible. Such has taken place in other towns. For instance, in one as near as Old Deerfield, it was effected under the pastorate of the Unitarian minister who continued with the people quite a number of years. The present pastor is distinctively Congregationalist, but applied for fellowship also with the Unitarian denomination, and received it. And here, the clergyman who ministers to the combined congregations and is the pastor of the people would fittingly have dual fellowship.

Independent religiously, without affiliation or membership in either of the Congregational churches or denominations, I doubt the accuracy of the present very catholic minister of the Unitarian church in saying that neither the Unity of God nor the Trinity can be scientifically proved. The scientist has certainly apprehended, even proved, the oneness of the universe and logically alleges the unity of the supreme Life of it. To pagan people there were gods many, to account for the different phenomena of nature. The scientist sets aside any such belief as demonstrably untrue. —A Citizen
